Dear sir,
Asset Created and transferred amount.

Case2: Delay in GRN and incorrect capitalization: In PEIPL, three units of 43-inch Ultra HD Smart LED TV were procured under PO number 4500024615 on 27-Jan-2025 at ₹18,700 per unit. Purchase order and invoice date were 27-Jan-2025, but the GRN was recorded only on 07-Jul-2025, leading to a delay of approximately 6 months. The delay in GRN and capitalization resulted in a portion of the one-year warranty period expiring before the assets were put to use. On further review of the Fixed Asset Register it was identified that two assets were capitalized with acquisition values of ₹18,700 (Asset Code: 32000134) and ₹37,400 (Asset Code: 32000135), indicating that the cost of two units was combined under single asset code 32000135 .Accordingly, two assets were capitalized against three units received and invoices.
Please create asset code, transfer from – 32000134 to that asset and share the screenshot to upload

Hi,

Significant Delay Between Invoice Date and GRN Creation: During the review of MB51 reports to analyse delays between invoice dates and Goods Receipt Notes (GRN), it was observed that, on average, GRNs were posted within 14 days of the invoice date. However, certain exceptions indicate significant delays, impacting asset capitalization and warranty coverage.

Case1: Delay in GRN: In PEIPL, the asset 'LENOVO E-14 GEN-4_21E3006500_14"FHD 16GB' was procured under PO number 4500021388. The invoice date and capitalization date were 26-Sep-2024. However, the GRN was posted on 30-Jul-2025, resulting in a delay of 307 days.
– Hence forth take approval from CFO for delay GRN

Case 3: Delay in GRN: In PEL, Lenovo Yoga i7-1360P, 16GB, 1TB SSD, 14" OLED was procured under PO number 4510000379 dated 19-Apr-2025, the GRN and capitalization were completed only on 07-Jul-2025, resulting in a delay of 79 days. This delay led to a reduction in the effective warranty coverage by 79 days, exposing the company to potential risks related to repairs and replacements

– Hence forth take approval from CFO for delay GRN
